

Mallory Appointed Speaker At Annual Model Parliament

Negative Psychology

Much as we all enjoy eating in the grill room at our beloved Cro-magnon house, those of us who cannot afford its delicious food and must bring our lunch will find it highly beneficial, as Bernie Moscovitz and Anne Bruker point out, to enjoy our meal in the lounge upstairs.

"Winter Winger" Chosen As Theme Of Decorations For Carnival Ball

The theme of this year's Carnival Ball will be "Winter Winger", with many murals representing all its aspects.

The Carnival Ball this year will have several improvements to offer. It will, however, be in many respects similar to last year's Ball.

There will be a big change in the format of the Cabaret this year. Attempts will be made to circulate more people through this room (B.W.F. Room). The calibre of the performances will also be raised.

There will be continuous entertainment. Two bands, that of Stan Bankley and of Paul Beauregard, will provide the music. These two bands are among the best available in Montreal.

Another important feature of this gala evening will be the drawing of the door prize. The prize will offer "a little travel and a lot of glamour".

MYSTERY PRIZE

To give an example of what this year's lucky winner might receive, last year's door prize consisted of a Volkswagen and was presented to the winner by the Carnival Queen. This year's prize promises to be even more interesting and exciting.

Men Wanted For Brecht Play

Male parts, both speaking and non-speaking, are still available in the English Department production of Bertholt Brecht's "The Caucasian Chalk Circle".

Professor Frank Faragoh, director of Brecht's modern classic, says he will be in Moyse Hall today between 1 and 2 pm to meet any male student wanting a part. "No previous experience is necessary," he says.

The atmosphere created by formal dress at last year's Ball proved to be most successful, inducing this year's committee to adopt the same idea. This is one of the few student dances which is formal, a suitable finale to close the 1962 Carnival.

Last year's Ball was a sell-out despite the request for formality. The Ball will be on Saturday, the 17 of February from 9 pm on. Tickets are at five dollars per couple.

A full release of these and other details will be presented in the Daily in a few days.

Campus Survey Failing

Lack of response from students chosen to participate in a nationwide sociological survey has led the SEC, which is in charge of the program on campus, to issue an appeal for more cooperation.

Of 1,320 forms handed out to students, only 280 have been completed and returned, reported Carol Turkenik, SEC representative. The deadline for the remaining forms is this Friday, and the Council expects that these will turn up.

The purpose of the survey is to inform the Royal Commission on Education of family, financial, emotional, etc. problems faced by a cross-section of Canadian university students.

The SEC urged those who have been tardy, to bring in their forms. It also emphasized that it will be the students who will benefit from the survey, in the form of lower fees, increased grants, and other government measures.

SUCCESSFUL SURVEY

For the survey to be successful, all forms must be handed in by the end of this week, at the latest. They can be returned to the janitor's office in the Arts Building, the SEC office in the Old Union, or to the persons who gave out the forms.

Professor Mallory, Head of the Department of Economics and Political Science, will be one of the Speakers of the House at this year's Model Parliament, to be held February 1-3. The name of the other Speaker has not been released.

The minority Liberal Government, headed by Prime Minister Sy Steinman will try to govern without forming a coalition, as had previously been suggested.

In a Daily interview, Steve Lipper, Chairman of the Steering Committee, stated that the reason for this decision is that the Liberals obviously cannot combine with parties having radically opposed policies, such as the Conservatives and the New Democratic Party. The Congress Towards Canadian Maturity which would have been ideal, has demanded more than the Liberals can agree to.

Hence, the Government will obviously be a shaky one, and may possibly be defeated before the end of the session. In such a case, the Progressive Conservative Party will be asked to form a government.

POSSIBLE MAJORITY

Lipper said that the P.C.s are at the moment actively seeking areas of agreement with the other parties, with the view to forming a majority.

The session will commence with the Speech from the Throne, outlining the Liberal policies, which will then be debated. A vote of confidence will be taken before the end of the Speech. If this is defeated, the Liberals will have to resign and the Progressive Conservatives will come to power.

Trade and Unemployment bills are among the main bills expected to be presented at the Parliament. Also to be presented are bills on Education, and a private member's bill on Nuclear Arms. Concerning Trade, improvements in import and export balances, the devaluation of the dollar, and the implications on Canada of the European Common Market will probably be discussed.

UNEMPLOYMENT

Under the second topic, Canada's half-million unemployed, and the possible exploitation of natural resources will be the source of the debate.

According to Lipper, this year's Model Parliament should be very interesting, as it will present a cross-section of political views ranging from right-of-center (P.C.) through center (Liberals) to left (N.D.P.). Obviously, all motions will be very strongly debated by both the Conservatives and the N.D.P.s, and the Liberals look like they will have a hard time of it.

This year's Model Parliament will run on Thursday, February 1 from 7:30 - 10:30 pm, Friday, February 2 from 7:30 - 10:30 pm, and Saturday, February 3 from 1:45 - 5 pm.

Keep Marching On?

Perhaps we are a little late with our congratulations to the actual members of the revamped Redmen Band; but from the sound of things we may be right on time with or sentiments of enthusiastic appreciation of the past year's alterations as a means of support for an increasingly active program in the next season.

To state the matter very concisely, a great deal of effort and money have already been spent on the Band; but, in order to achieve the calibre of a first rate group an appreciable amount of money and considerable more effort, both on the part of organizers and players must still be expended.

As a part of this year's innovations, we can list the proud acquisition of distinctive and much-needed new uniforms, several instruments, and increased membership and a lighted practice area on the middle field. Most of the trappings are there, but the mannequin still is not lively enough.

In the opinion of those most closely concerned, a major factor in the solution to the problem is the creation of a University band which would practice and function throughout the college year, as opposed to the present system of a musical appendage to the football season.

Let's admit it: before any organization such as the Band can hope to attract an active following it must be able to boast a sound and widespread reputation. Before the Redman Band can attain such status, it must enlarge upon its repertoire of marching drills and improve the quality of musical performance. Obviously, both conditions cannot be fulfilled during the short interim of organized practice before the football schedule; neither can the band afford to neglect one in favour of the other. Ergo, we must agree with the suggestion of a longer duration of active existence and a new approach to the idea of a band at McGill.

This course of action is not as simple as it may seem, however. There must be increased financial support. A larger and more varied selection of music, aimed not only at a marching band but at a potential musical organization must be obtained. During the pre-football rehearsal period, more emphasis must be placed on the arrangement and perfection of marching drills. Most important of all, student interest and participation must not only be maintained but augmented to justify such a program and to make it a success.

On the other hand, McGill stands to gain a year-round University Band which could participate in various university functions, as well as a good, if not a potentially outstanding marching band to add to the interest of its football program.

Perhaps we are being overly optimistic in our arguments, but considering the notable improvement of this year's Band over previous attempts, we certainly feel that the proposed venture is worth serious consideration.

Letters To The Editor

Indonesian Explains His Country's Position

Dear Madam,

During the past weeks, the Indonesian students at McGill had often been asked by the other students why Indonesia is unwilling to negotiate without any precondition to solve the West Irian (known to most of the Canadians as West New Guinea) dispute.

To benefit those who have asked and still feel that more satisfactory answers could be acquired as well as those who might be interested but up to now never had the opportunity to put any question to us, please, allow me to take the liberty to make a few statements which, I hope, will contribute somewhat to answering the question.

The development of the dispute within the last eleven years has at the end forced us to go very far. Recently the Indonesian government has called a mobilization. By having done so our country practically has put everything it has at stake. In other words, we now have gone much too far to risk any failure in a negotiation. This is why that we now are only willing to negotiate under the condition which ensures the transfers of the administration of West Irian to us.

In passing, it should be noted that the Netherlands has changed in their Constitution the name "Nederlands Oost Indie" into "Indonesia" about one year before the transfer of sovereignty which took place at the end of 1949, so that, even leaving aside the other considerations, it is far from being unreasonable to claim that the transfer of sovereignty over West Irian has already taken place. This means that what still has to take place now is the transfer of the administration of the area.)

What had been the development which at the end had forced the Indonesian government to call a mobilization?

First of all, it should be remembered that we always had been willing to negotiate without precondition. The two parties had negotiated for three years since 1950. But in 1953 the Netherlands stopped the discussion and since then has made further talks impossible.

After then the Indonesian willingness to negotiate without precondition did not recede. On the contrary, since then for three years unceasingly Indonesia had tried to solve the dispute through the United Nations. This letter would be too lengthy to mention the Indonesian efforts to get the Netherlands back to the conference table again, and how those efforts have been rejected not only by the Netherlands but also by most of the Western Powers.

But mention should be made of the resolution which was put before the General Assembly at its session in 1957. The resolution was a request that a Good Offices Commission be appointed by the President of the General Assembly to assist Indonesia and the Netherlands to negotiate. But, again, that resolution was rejected by the Netherlands and, of course, by most of the Western Powers.

Then, and only then, we started to realize that in spite of the United Nations one still often has to rely more on his own strength rather than on the goodwill of the others. And then we also started to be fully aware of the fact that peaceful means can only be effective if handled by a strong hand.

In addition, we then saw clearly that most of the Western Powers, — their hands tied by the existing relationship, their minds too much easily inclined to put the Netherlands in the right because to them it always has been clear that the Dutch is one of the best peoples in the world, it is very difficult to occur to them that in one case, namely in colonial matters, the Dutch possibly can be placed among the best nations — were just unable to give us the peaceful means which at that time lay in their hands.

It was very fortunate that at that time the Indonesian leaders were able to keep themselves cool enough to refrain themselves from going to those who might be willing to help to get some arms and then start fighting. What they did then was, after having warned the world beforehand, merely to nationalize Dutch enterprises at home.

It was really fortunate that at that time the Indonesian leaders were willing to forget their experience they had in the middle of 1947 and at the end of 1948. Some of the readers may know that we had then agreements which were known as "Linggardjati" and "Renville" agreements.

Both of them implied a clause which provided for an arbitrage in case of disagreement between the parties. But as soon as a disagreement rose the Netherlands then found it much more easier to make Indonesia agree by launching military attacks, in which case they were badly mistaken. Anyhow, twice disagreements had risen, and twice, one in 1947 and the other in 1948, military assaults were launched.

And now, after having rejected all the Indonesian proposals for negotiation without precondition at the United Nations, the Netherlands prides herself before the world upon a plan which very mischievously is said to be aiming at self-determination. They have done so while they know very well that the area is still under dispute, and, not less important, they have done so while they know better than anybody else that it is extremely doubtful whether West Irian could stand alone. And what does all this mean to us Indonesians?

We are the other party in the dispute whom the Netherlands, by doing all those just mentioned, tried to shun. And most of the peoples in the world know that our case is much too strong to be ignored. And in addition to these, we still remember very vividly how the Netherlands from 1945 to the end of 1949 had tried to frustrate our struggle for independence by trying to make separated puppet states of almost all regions of Indonesia. Is it not understandable that the Indonesian government now says: This is the last straw we can take, and decides to call mobilization?

By all these arguments I do not want to pretend to be able to change the view of those who have had other opinion on the matter. However there is one thing I sincerely hope the interested students would do. My Indonesian friends and I, who happen to be in Montreal and studying at McGill this year, would be very happy if the other students, in forming their own judgment on the matter, would be willing to take the above arguments into consideration.

B.S. Muljana,
Indonesian Students
Association at McGill.

Why One Student Didn't Vote

Dear Madam:

Mr. Peter Lyman would have me "damned" because in company with several thousand fellow students I did not cast a vote in the Model Parliament elections. Imbued with such a sense of civic duty, one would have hoped that your correspondent would not employ such vulgarities, especially in print.

It matters not if half the federal cabinet tried to solicit my vote, especially in view of my low opinion of this cabinet. It matters even less if the nation's political leaders are "closely eyeing the results" because if this is true they are badly deluded. Let me point out that last year CTCM meant "Change the Clock Movement" even if now these same initials represent something more exalted. I also recall in years past the existence of a group called the "Bloc Populaire". If these gentlemen wish to have their fun, by all means let them do so, but allow me to exercise my indifference.

It is to be hoped that in time Mr. Lyman will, in addition to manners, acquire a sense of proportion and reserve his indignation for things that matter.

Canadian Nuclear Bases Condemned By Liberals

The annual two-day convention of the Canadian University Liberal Federation, held in Ottawa this weekend passed a motion condemning nuclear bases on Canadian soil and elected a new executive.

The 200 delegates elected Ed Roberts, former Varsity Editor, President of the Federation. Elected to the executive were: Tex Enmark, JBC, Vice-President; Raynald Langlois, Laval, Treasurer; Eve Hargraft, Osgoode Hall, Secretary (Eng); Jacques Boulanger, Ottawa, Secretary (Fr); Bill Rowe, Memorial, Maritimes Vice-President; Anne Booth, Assumption, Ontario Vice-President; Greg Brodsky, Manitoba, Western Vice-President.

Motions passed at the convention included a stand against arms and bases in Canada "at this time". These motions left the door open to future acceptance, and to suggestions that Canada join the organization of American States, and recognize the Republic of China.

The French speaking Liberals called for the defeat of a motion stating that indirect financing of education by the Federal Government through the Provinces is not interfering with provincial rights. It was defeated.

WUS Cocktail Party Honours Overseas Scholarship Students

In addition to cocktails, guests will be treated to an informal discussion by Morris Fish and Allan Golden on their trip to Sweden last summer on a WUS scholarship.

The hostesses for the party are Maureen Appel, Heather Dewar and Cathy Harvey.

Career In Social Work Appeals To Both Sexes

by PAUL BANNERMAN

Commenting on social work as a career, Professor C.G. Gifford, termed it primarily a "bi-sexual profession". Speaking to a group of Arts and Science students, Professor Gifford went on to say that more and more men are making social work a career so that the profession is definitely co-educational.

There are 27 different social agencies and services in Montreal ranging from the Department of Veterans' Affairs to the John Howard Society, which aids in the rehabilitation of prisoners. At the present time, there are five jobs for every graduate from the School of Social Work, and thus graduates have an excellent chance of obtaining the type of position they want in the city of their choice.

GOOD SALARIES

Upon graduation, prospective workers can expect salaries comparable to those received by teachers with the same education. Men are especially desirable for administrative posts and thus they may move up quite quickly.

After eight or ten years experience, social workers can expect to have a salary of from $7,000-$10,000. Very few, however, in Canada earn much more over this figure, but as Professor Gifford pointed out, people do not go into social work primarily to make a fortune.

As Professor Gifford was speaking mainly to those students contemplating social work as a career, he briefly outlined the requirements needed to enter the School of Social Work at McGill. The absolute requirement is a Bachelor degree in which the student has had an introduction to both sociology and psychology.

The prospective social worker must have had an average above 65%, and must be interested in people rather than things. Not required but certainly desired is that the student has had some previous experience in providing group leadership, and has taken introductory courses in both economics and political science.

The future social worker, after having completed his or her Bachelor degree, must follow a two-year graduate program. When this program is completed, the student receives a Master's Degree of Social Work. During the two-year graduate program, the student has three days of academic work and two days of field work in the average week.

GRADUATE TRAINING

During the second year, slightly more emphasis is put on field work and the student follows a more specialized program of study in the field of his choice.

Professor Gifford mentioned that there are a number of bursaries available for students wishing to follow a course in social work, and the whole profession is hopefully awaiting the announcement of increased help from the Federal Government in this respect.

Intramural Highlights

by TOM LOCKWOOD

Intramural sports completed its second week of activities in the new year last Friday.

In Floor Hockey, the R.L.C.'s from the Faculty of Engineering, led by the two-goal outburst of Fedor, blanked Law. In another encounter, or supposed encounter, Architecture failed to show and thus the Inlays from Dentistry won by default. The Red Wings, by virtue of three unanswered tallies in the second period, overpowered the Sappers 4-2. The big star of the evening was Master who provided twin markers in the winning cause. In the biggest single game offensive of the season the Bankers mutilated the 4-Cycles by the score of 10-1. Brick led the slaughter with four goals, followed closely by Hughes, Cameron, and Monteith with two apiece.

The Ice Hockey spotlight was stolen last week by the powerful Arts and Science team which trampled two lowly opponents by the identical score of 6-0. The victims were Engineering and Medicine respectively. Scotty McRae led the onslaught with a total of three goals, which is not bad for a first-year student. Smith duplicated this feat, while Johansson and Dugay collectively with two points. In the only close match of the week, Engineering squeaked out a 3-2 victory over the Shysters. Robinson, with a two-goal effort led the victory parade.

The final scene of action was Volleyball where three matches were on tap. In another scheduled game, Architecture defaulted and thus the Giants picked up two points. Unfortunately, this was the second default for the Architecture team and therefore they are no longer in the league. On Wednesday of last week, the Vikings continued their winning ways by overcoming Dent 2A two game to zero by the identical scores of 15-1. The Mops topped the 4-Cycles 15-4, 15-2 and thus nullified the necessity of a third game. In the only other contest, the People outdid the Bankers by the same scores of 15-4, 15-12 and thereby duplicated the Mops.

Covo's Boys In Action

McGill Intramural Champions, the Vikings took a two out of three contest from the professors, defeating them by a score of 15-8, and 15-2, and losing to them 15-13.

Fencing Club Spears RMC

The McGill Fencing Club had a very successful weekend in a tournament against RMC on Saturday. McGill won 16 bouts to 8, and took the first 7 places in the individual results.

Seven McGillians and 5 men from RMC were present, a McGill man fencing for RMC. The University of Montreal could not attend as had been planned.

Benitah won all his bouts. He carries the hopes of McGill with him to Toronto in February for the Intercollegiate. Last year he won both foil and epee at these.

It is assumed that RMC's weakness was due to the fact that they did not compete in Kingston.

KA's Take Victory In IFC Swim Meet

Kappa Alpha squeezed out a narrow victory over Delta Upsilon in the IFC swim meet last Saturday night. The KA's won the meet by a thirty-three and a half to 33 margin.

Phi Epsilon came third in the meet scoring 18 points. Last year's winners, Alpha Delta Phi, finished fourth with 13 points. The leaders were followed by contestants from a half-dozen fraternities.

The diving competition was won by DU Fred McRobie. John Markey and Roger Hayes, both KA's, came second and third.

The meet concluded with medley and free-style relays which were dominated by the two leading teams (KA, first and second; DU, second and first).

The meet was also marked by a large turnout of spectators.

Apolitism Revived By Polish Students

Polish students are reviving the ideals of "Apolitism"; so charged Mr. S. Wiczorek of the Slask Politechnic Institute during the National Conference of the Student Section of the Union of Socialist Youth, in Warsaw.

Mr. Wiczorek defined apolitical students as those who "avoid full participation in the social and political life of their country". He added that ZMS (the Polish Kom-somol) has yet to start stemming "this rising Bourgeois tide", and if it is to be a "fighting ideological and educational organization", it must do more than guarantee a student's food and lodging.

STUDENTS SCOLDED

The Conference was attended by 300 delegates from every Polish institution of higher learning. They were all "scolded" for failing to co-ordinate ZMS activities at the schools with the activities of the other major State-run youth groups, the Rural Youth Union (ZMW) and the Polish Student Association (ZSP).

One entire afternoon of the Conference was devoted to a closed "heart-to-heart" discussion between the delegates and Mr. Roman Zambrowski, Politburo member and Secretary of the Central Committee of the Polish United Workers (Communist) Party.
